

Houston Texas: Heritage Violation Follow Up

Sierra Times has received a number of e-mails inquiring about the student that was viciously beaten for a Confederate Flag on a school library book. This story was picked up by many other news outfits after it was published on Sierra Times.

Many of the feedback messages were questions about where to send contributions to help out the family or his legal defense. We will answer those questions, but first we need to address another major concern based on much of the correspondence to Sierra Times. Yes, we did follow up on the story as per reader demand.

There were many letters on the same subject Here's one example:

"I was intrigued by this article:

<http://www.sierratimes.com/archive/files/jun/02/arnp060201.htm>

and I'd like to learn more about it. I did several web searches and was not able to find any other links regarding this story. Can you refer me to another source?"

We lost count of how many messages we received asking similar questions. It seems that since folks can't find this story anywhere else, they can't get worked up about it and Sierra Times should (we guess) quote some newswire or other news source just to make folks believe this actually happened. This is the point where we stop being nice...

Why not ask the Dallas Morning News for their "sources"? How about the Associated Press? How about CNN? Why not ask the Houston Chronicles why they DIDN'T cover the story in the first place?? C'mon - you think with Texas just passing some of the worst 'thought crime' (a.k.a hate crime) legislation in the country, someone might have contacted the local media about this story?

Ladies and Gentlemen, for all intents and purposes - we were the source for the story. Dr Neill H. Payne wrote it. We just published it. The fact that some of you couldn't find the story anywhere else doesn't mean it didn't happen. Like on the left, when their partisan organizations send out a press release, those fish wraps around the country you read everyday think it's gospel (even though it makes you puke). The same happened here. The Oleichi family is being represented by the Southern Legal Resource Center. Don't blame us if others won't publish non left-wing press releases.

For you folks in Southern Texas who first heard about it all on the Chris Baker Show - \(KPRC - AM 950\), you heard the left call in making allegations that the victim in the case was a "racist"; hence the beating was justifiable.

Brown shirts on brown skin - I guess.

The attorney handling the matter, Kirk Lyons, was contacted by Sierra Times and will be contacting KPRC and, due to the outrage from the "Official Talk Show of Houston", probably a few more local media affiliates as well. This story now has Houston's attention. But Let's give credit where credit is due.

Not Sierra Times - not even Lyons of the Southern Legal Resource Center - YOU did this folks. Real Americans who choose not to sit on their 'conservatism', speak out and spread the word. Real Americans who believe there is more to life than the Associated Press. Sierra Times.com is your news service - merely a vehicle to provide news and information that obviously isn't getting out elsewhere. Our best reporters are our readers. There may be thousands of similar stories out there. And today, there is at least one news service willing to take it on.

To put it bluntly folks: It pains the media and other leftists to admit that we're a news service just like them. Should Real American media get that from it's own readers as well? Have we been psychologically beaten that bad that we have to hear from a news source we have no faith in before we believe it?

When our founding fathers wrote the First Amendment, They didn't have the USA Today, and the New York Times in mind. It was We the People - that Fourth Branch of Government given the duty to keep that suspicious eye on government officials.

Welcome to the Digital Revolution, America - where Fabian Socialism may govern the news rooms, and kings and queens controlled information for centuries. That empire is crumbling, one mouse click at a time.

It's something many in the Second Amendment crowd forget - The First Amendment is a First Strike Weapon. That's why they wrote it first.

Carry on,
